Da tut sich was in den Staaten Von Bettina Heintges Ich bin gerade dabei, dieses Buch zu lesen. Und ich habe mir die Augen gerieben als ich das Erscheinungsdatum sah: 2007. Der Autor hat die Wirtschaftskrise vllig klar vorhergesehen, er rt zum Beispiel dazu, jetzt sein Haus zu verkaufen. Seine Analyse unseres Wirtschaftssystems ist brilliant. Ob allerdings die Lösungsvorschläge nicht ein bisschen naiv sind? Rückkehr in eine Stammeskultur, Nahrungsmittelproduktion in Permakultur, alles gut und schön- aber ich werde immer misstrauisch wenn mir jemand ein paradiesische Utopie anpreist...Aber lesenswert ist das Buch auf jeden Fall, am Besten in Kombination mit Daniel Quinn : Ishmael. Viele Ideen der beiden Autoren überschneiden sich, bei Daniel Quinn ist es in Romanform geschrieben, bei Burr als Sachbuch. Offensichtlich hat in bestimmten Kreisen der USA ein Umdenkungsprozess begonnen, eine Nachdenklichkeit was die Verheerungen des Kapitalismus angeht. Spannend aber auch bedrückend.

Kurzbeschreibung Why do we have to participate in the destruction of the earth to be civilized? Why do we have to work to buy food? Were food and land free once? Is there a better way to live? Are we living our truth? Are there wisdoms that we are not being taught? What changes will make a real difference? Culturequake finds real long-term solutions by taking a hard look at the crises of our modern culture, how we got here and why we may not be able to fix civilization. Chuck Burr outlines a better way to live beyond modern consumer culture. By seeing through whole-systems eyes, we can start living more in tune with our needs and more deeply connected to the earth. Don't wait! read this book and let us create a new culture together. The idea that there is a different way to live that harmonizes our relations with all living beings is both comforting and exciting. Culturequake is a highly recommended read. Kris Holstrom, Executive Director, The New Community Coalition Chuck is doing the assessment and imagining that we need to move forward into the post petroleum age. Here is how we get a real life. We all can use this map to start shaking the paradigm in our local communities and families. Let's get quaking and shake up the future! Tom Ward, Siskiyou Mountain Quaker Chuck Burr is a farmer, educator and founder of the Southern Oregon Permaculture Institute and Restoration Farm in Ashland, Oregon. He serves on nonprofit boards, was a software CEO, interned for President Reagan and has an MBA.
